New York—WASHINGTON—Paris

Every Kind of Stylish and Desirable Fur Included in Our August Fur Sale

And the August Sale Prices demonstrate conclusively our leadership in value giving, as the styles prove our authoritativeness in modes.

Furs are keeping pace with the other apparel of the woman's wardrobe. Fashion was never so generous in its many conceptions or its original contributions. Never were there so many colors in Furs—colors to harmonize with every shade that may be introduced in gown, costume or suit, and furs expressly fashioned for the different occasions of dress—for street, for afternoon, for evening, for motoring, for skating.

The vast variety and beauty of Furs proves that this is to be a fur season without equal—the prices we have marked on Furs during this August Sale establishes the present as the best time to buy.

We Present Here a Few of the Interesting Features of the Fur Sale:

THE DAILY ADVENTURES OF PUSS IN BOOTS, Jr.

"Began to eat the plumcake."
By DAVID CORY.

A Terrible Fight Stopped by Using Plum Cake. Parents Try It!

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
As the circus to which Puss Junior belonged entered a town one bright sunny morning, the Lion and the Unicorn escaped from their cages. Great was the excitement! All the circus people started after them with long ropes, hoping to be able to lasso them.

BEDTIME STORIES.

At first the townsfolk were greatly frightened, but gradually, as they found out that the Lion and the Unicorn paid little attention to them, their fear gave way to interest. It seems that the Lion was an enemy of the Unicorn, and as soon as they were free from their cages they began to fight very fiercely.

"The Lion and the Unicorn were fighting for the crown. The Lion beat the Unicorn all around the town. Some gave them white bread, and some gave them brown. Some gave them plumcake, and sent them out of town."

If it had not been for the plumcake I verily believe they would have been fighting still. But as soon as the Unicorn saw the plumcake he said to the Lion: "What's the use of fighting, Leon? Let's have a truce. In fact, I'm hungry."

"So am I," replied the Lion. "I haven't had a sweet thing since I joined the circus. And you know how hard it is to see all the little boys and girls eating candy and popcorn and not being able to get even one little piece."

"That's quite true," replied the Unicorn. "People seem to think all I require is hay. And as for you, they think raw meat is enough."

With these friendly words they stopped fighting and began to eat the plumcake. All the townsfolk stood by watching them. When the circus men arrived on the scene they were too surprised for the moment to do a thing. They just stood still and watched the two animals eat the cake, even waiting until the Lion had picked up the last crumb and the Unicorn the last raisin. Then they came forward very quietly and threw a rope first over the Lion's head and then over the Unicorn's, and led them back to their cages. Puss Junior, who had by this time arrived on the scene, turned to the people and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, it was very kind of you to give plumcake to our animals. It only goes to show what kindness will do. I hope you will appreciate how much we thank you for what you have done, and also that you will come to our show tonight. I can assure you we will give you a double bill to show you how much we appreciate what you have done for us."

"Hurrah!" cried the crowd. "Three cheers for Sir Cat!"

That night there was a tremendous attendance. The tent was crowded. Every body was in a jolly frame of mind. All the circus people did their best. Puss Junior jumped through three hoops without touching the back of the big white horse and the clown was funnier than he had ever been in all his life. The circus lady never looked so pretty nor did she ever ride so well before. And it took the ticket seller all night to count the money.

HOROSCOPE.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

Wednesday, August 2, 1916.

Astrologers read this as rather a forbidding day, since Mars is strongly adverse, while both Neptune and Jupiter are unfriendly.

It is a day in which to be exceedingly circumspect in all affairs, whether they be financial or domestic.

The month may be a most eventful one in Europe for the New Moon for August presages all the conditions of war as greatly intensified.

Mercury is in a place indicating some strong peace movement. In this the United States will play a great part, but the seers declare that negotiations will be slow and attended by many disappointments.

England and Canada may have occasion to remember the next three weeks as an exceedingly anxious period. The position of Uranus denotes trouble on the seas and for all shipping interests.

Saturn forecasts financial anxieties for Great Britain and enormous expenditures of money.

Austria comes under a sinister power that bodes ill for her country army. There will be general agitation concerning some point in educating both boys and girls, and this will gain headway next month.

Strikes that will disturb a wide area again are prognosticated. One of these may affect transportation in the East. Contagious diseases may be prevalent before frost comes. Sanitary precautions against infection should be stringent, especially in sea coast cities.

Genius will flower in many places of the world during the next few years. It is prophesied, and America will produce famous artists in music, art and literature, who will work in strange concord, astrologers foretell.

Persons whose birthdate it is should not speculate during the coming year. Business will demand attention.

Children born on this day may have to work and to overcome obstacles. These subjects of Leo often have talent for the plastic arts.

ALTHOUGH I have known Miss Young for many years, I have never realized how thoroughly imbued with the spirit of fun she is until one evening we gathered an impromptu party and went out to see the sights of New York.

I wrote about that once before, telling about our slumming party through Chinatown. The rest of the women in the party were quite frightened by the shadowy alleyways and the queer, shuffling figures of the Chinamen who passed in and out of their doorways, but Miss Young, confident she had never known what it was to be afraid of anything, and would even dare to walk up the flights of rickety stairs into their little hovels of homes.

"Please, ma'am," some one stopped us after we had gone an uncertain flight. Turning around, we found ourselves looking at the most abject, forlorn-looking girl we had ever seen. "Will you please help me?" she asked in broken tones. "I—I have epileptic fits."

Never have I seen a more sympathetic face than Miss Young's as she dove into her pocketbook and gave this girl a generous handful of coins. "Epileptic fits!" she whispered to me. "Is there anything more terrible?"

We walked around the corner and there we were stopped by a doddering old lady. "Please, ma'am, wouldn't you help a poor old lady who has epileptic fits?" whined the broken old voice, redolent with whiskey.

Again the sympathetic Clara dipped into her pocketbook. It was only a few steps farther along when the eyes of the third supplicant for alms fell upon that embroidered pocketbook and the plea was made, "Dear, kind lady, won't you please help an old man with epileptic fits?" In spite of ourselves, this brought a smile to our lips and a look of startled surprise to Miss Young's face.

"I think, Mary, we had better get out of here. It looks as though we had hit an epileptic colony," she whispered, her big brown eyes round with amazement. "Who's that?" she cried, wheeling around sharply as a strange looking woman came walking our way on very weird and wobbly limbs.

"Epileptic!" some one cried and the shout was echoed down the dingy alley and carried to a group of bystanders hovering in front of one of the little chop suey joints.

"Look out, Clara," I called a warning. "The woman is making straight for your pocketbook." But, alas, it was too late!

"Please, ladies, I'll have an epileptic fit for fifty cents," the woman was saying as she frothed at the mouth.

Clara's cold, moist hand closed over my wrist in a terrible grip and I felt myself almost whirled through space as we turned and fled down the stairs into the street, with the woman pursuing us.

"Only a quarter, kind ladies, only a quarter!" but neither of us dared to turn and look for fear we would miss our footing, stumble and fall, and the unhappy entertainer with the fits would catch up with us. "Aw, gee!" lamented the guide. "You missed one of the finest sights in Chinatown—that old gal's been pullin' them fits for the last twenty years. Gee! but it's some sight, the way she spins around on the floor like a top and spits and cries—say, de whole evenin's spoiled—you ain't seen nuttin'!"

How often Miss Young and I have laughed over this little episode, especially when we discovered that they were all fakers, and even the nice-looking old lady had been saving up a bank account for many years at so much per sympathy.

Miss Young is one of the most beautiful women on the screen and among her notable pictures are "Hearst in Exile," "My Official Wife," "Camille," "Trilby," "The Yellow Passport," and "The Feast of Life."

She has now incorporated her own company and promises us wonderful pictures. Many of her admirers have written me asking for her address, and these can send their letters to the Clara Kimball Young Corporation, Seventh avenue, at Forty-ninth street, New York city.

Answers to Correspondents.
G. L. P.—You can address Violet Mersereau, in care of the Universal Film Company, Paula Shay in care of the Ivan Film Corporation, New York City. Beatriz Michelina, care of California Motion Picture Corporation, San Rafael, Cal.

W. M.—Geraldine Farrar is playing in pictures at present. I do not know in what plays she will star after she completes "Joan of Arc."

Pearl B.—Moving picture actors and actresses do not use rouge—it photographs black. You can write Henry Walthall in care of the Essanay, Chicago, Ill.

R. E. M.—My brother Jack is five feet nine. He is now with Selig, Chicago. Lottie is not appearing in pictures now.

F. B.—Norma Phillips is not playing at present. No, you cannot set a scenario to more than one company, or you would find yourself in very serious trouble indeed. Wallace Reid is with Lasky.
